

Andy's Thoughts

Hello... and welcome to my occasional thoughts. I am Andy, I live here at Monte Naturista O Barão with my wife Jill, my dog Sid and a cat named TomTom We first came here in our caravan in June 2007 to camp and look for our own place in the sun. We never left! Since then this little paradise has grown into what is in my opinion the best naturist site... in the world! In the coming months. I'll keep in touch, through this page with news, opinions and info.

August

Happy Summer to everyone. Congratulations to France on winning the World football cup. Today will be 40+degrees. A little too hot for Andy, but Tony loves it. We have had health problems during July. I have had a rapid heart beat (180) and poor Tony had pneumonia. We have both been fixed now. The others, Jef, Laura and Jill are well and ready to serve After an extremely wet Winter and Spring, things are drying fast. We all hope for a refree period throughout the country. The bombeiros deserve a quiet time

Jill and I spent a couple of weeks in England visiting family. It was warmer and sunnier than here in Portugal and amazingly, our national football team got to the semi finals, by employing the cunning strategy of losing a game in the group stages. We then allowed Croatia to win and avoided receiving a good beating from the French. Success

I look forward to sharing a glass of water with you should you make it to Barao (beer and wine are not allowed for me due to the heart thing). You will recognise me as Le Miserable, sitting alone, sipping Pedras or something equally boring. Sigh.
